There are several stories and theories in relation to the origin of the fire, all agreeing, however, that it was the work of an incendiary. The most probable of these stories is given by a servant girl in the employ of John G. Thompson. She says when she arose, at about four o'clock, yesterday morning, she saw three men in the yard, one on the top of the grape arbor, which runs up to the back end of the house. They were dressed in gray clothes, and wore tull beards. Thinking they were robbers, she started to give ar alarm, when they ran oft. Shortly after she saw them in the alley, one carrying an the merriment and mirth that accompany arm, and the third, she thinks, had matchaxe, one had a bundle of straw under his the bundle of lighted straw. New York Wool Market—Oct. 26.

There are more manufacturers in the market, who are purchasing fleeces a little more freely at ab ut former figures. The demand can hadly becalled more active, as the buy rs are taking just enough to keep the wheel in motion for a few days. The market retains its old teatures of an indisposition to purchase, and a willingness to sell, even at concessions. In pulled there is more doing, but at unchanged figures. Trans wool is quite scarce, and manufacturers wishing this style are compelled to resort to California, of a high the stock is quite large. Some large sales of foreign have been made, but generally there is little inquiry, although the present cost of importation prevents any decline in price. The sales are 340,000 his fleeces at 226 for shearings, 283,30c for unwashed; 388,42c for low western and state; 46,265c for medium Blinci. Michigan and state; 45,250c for medium and go d.
